

FOREFRONT SMALL GROUP STUDY

A JOURNEY THROUGH ECCLESIASTES
Let Your Listening Become Living
Our days are fleeting, but they matter. Ecclesiastes 11–12 invites us to enjoy God's gifts, remember our Creator, and live out His wisdom today.
Jesus offers forgiveness and the help of His Spirit. We can take the next faithful step in response to God's love, without waiting for life to settle down.

Icebreaker:
If your least favorite household chore became an Olympic event, what would the commentators say about your performance?

DAILY WALK / NEXT STEP:
Give One Step a Place
Finish: "With God's help, I will ___ on ___." Choose a specific action and put it on your calendar.

Ask Jesus for help, and share your step with someone who can pray and check in.

GROUP STUDY 11.08.26

Read: Ecclesiastes 11:7–10; 12:1, 13–14

1. When have tomorrow's concerns kept you from enjoying a good moment? What helps you be present?

2. Ecclesiastes invites us to enjoy life while honoring God. What does enjoying something wisely look like? When can enjoyment become unhealthy?

3. What meaningful things do people postpone until life settles down? Why is waiting for the perfect time so convincing?

4. What could remembering your Creator look like in an ordinary workday, family interaction, or spending decision?

5. What reactions does "fear God" bring up for you? How do awe, humility, and accountability shape your understanding of a relationship with Him?

6. How can we distinguish a decision needing prayer and counsel from a clear step we're avoiding? What helps us move from knowing to doing?

7. Jesus offers forgiveness and helps us change; we don't earn God's love through good behavior. How might that change our response to failure or our willingness to ask for help?
