FROM THE PASTOR

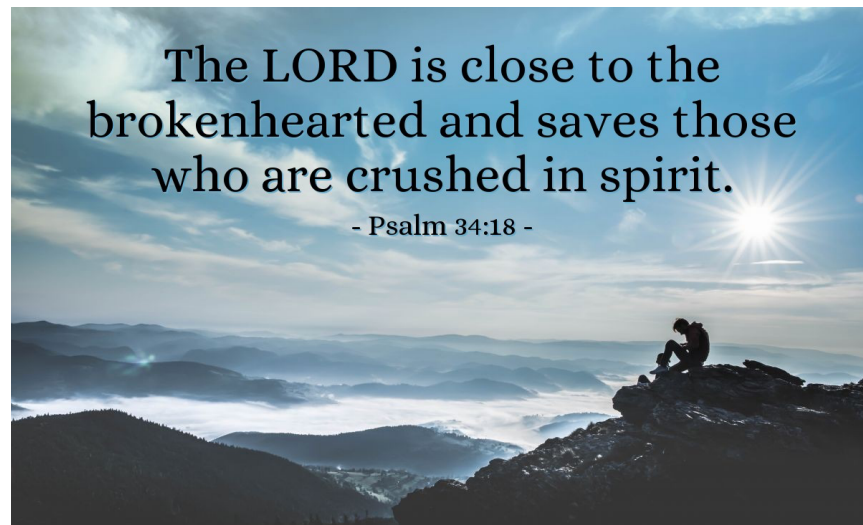

Psalm 34:18, The LORD is near to the brokenhearted and saves those who are crushed in spirit.

This past Sunday night was a painful reminder of the uncertainty of life. I did not know Julianne personally but from everyone I have spoken with, she was an incredible young lady with a bright future. My heart has groaned this week thinking about her family, her friends and those involved in the wreck. I have also heard the cry of students struggling to process such a tragic moment. Others have asked numerous questions like, Why did God allow this? Does He even care? I think that's the cry of the soul. We look around us and think, "This isn't right." Something within cries, "It isn't supposed to be this way!"

Those questions do not reveal a lack of faith, they instead reveal a truth about all of us. We were not made to experience such pain. Death was not to be our norm. Therefore, it prompts struggle and pain as we wrestle with its presence. Yet, as we suffer the pain of death on this earth, we are reminded that God has suffered as well for it. God is not absent in suffering. He sent His son, Jesus Christ, to suffer on our behalf that we may be redeemed, forgiven and ultimately removed from this fallen world of sin. This week, I rejoice that God is not only near to the brokenhearted but He has made a way so that every person can escape the pain of eternal death and draw near to Him in heaven.

Despite this theological clarity, the pain of such tragic death still weighs heavily. Paul says that we are to grieve as those with hope. As the body of Christ, we are compelled to pray in these moments. So let us pray for peace that transcends comprehension for family and friends. Let us pray for good to come from such tragedy. Let us pray for hope to be found alone in Jesus, who suffered that we may be saved.

Pastor Justin
