

Stillwater Christian Church's response Covid-19 Coronavirus: Updated 12pm April 4, 2021

Since the outbreak of Covid-19 last year, we made some temporary changes due to limited information and knowledge we had regarding the outbreak in its early stages. We originally stated that we were going to temporarily change the way we do some things with our church programming until the threat passes. Since that time, we have come to learn much more about the virus, and along with the measures that have been taken by our medical community to manage the severity and danger of the virus, we feel the time has come to return to many of our pre-Covid-19 practices. Some things have changed, maybe permanently, such as our use of self-contained communion cups and offering a drop box for your offering. But at this time and moving forward we will no longer be implementing those early measures that were used to mitigate the spread of the virus and flatten the curve. Still, in the event that you feel that you cannot make it to one of our services out of a sense of caution, we want you to know that we continue to make available our online service at www.stillwaterchristian.com.

Please understand that we will continue to do our part in providing a safe worship environment for our community. If you have any questions please direct them to our elders.
