Preparing the Way for the Beloved Community

The Martin Luther King Center for Nonviolent Social Change was founded by Coretta Scott King in 1968. The King Center’s mission is to empower people to create a just, humane, equitable, and peaceful world by applying Dr. King’s nonviolent philosophy and methodology. Unitarian Universalists also seek to create the Beloved Community which Rev. Dr. King envisioned. What might be our philosophy and methodology which would empower us to move closer to this goal? *

The Human Spirit

How do we human beings “find our center” as this month’s worship and learning theme suggests? This Sunday explores the human spirit and the yearning to be connected to something greater than ourselves. To honor the Lunar New Year, our RE children will appear after the service in dragon form. *

TOUCHSTONES

Rev. David Carl Olson

As a teenager, I loved that weekend when my Scout troop would have its winter campout. We’d pitch our tents in the snow, build an enormous fire, and spent what felt like forever considering the stars. With adults who clearly cared for us, we were wild boys released in our imaginations and restrained by the cold. (I can almost see my breath as I write this!)

On the night of the Winter Solstice, I walked on the grounds of the congregation. The moon was just a tiny sliver of itself. The air was cold and my heart was warm from the celebrating. These two extremes held my anticipation for the Christmas and New Year holidays that loomed. For a moment, it felt as if “all was right with the world.”

In the northeast regions of the US, the cloud cover of the winter is especially dispersed. The condensation that hangs in the air around us is in part crystallized, and heavenly bodies twinkle especially. Being out-of-doors on a winter night opens me up to expansiveness as I look above. Being out-of-doors on a winter night causes me to walk more closely with kindred as I look around—even as I look at a campfire.

This time of year, this January when the hubbub of holidays slows, I find an opportunity for thinking and feeling deeply. Looking into the stars, sparking our imaginations, yes! And getting close to our kindred. Sharing stories. Taking time to speak from our lives, and to listen well. Learning the traditions of our community—and learning from those outside of us.

Later this month, we will offer an opportunity for a Fourth Friday experience that is meant to be a time to evoke our imaginations. We’ll share a meal and a few songs, and then hear from members of our community who have been involved in Small Group Ministry. We’ll break into smaller groups and practice listening deeply to each other. And, I hope, hear and speak words of encouragement and solidarity with each other. Maybe even touch the Universal Love that flows among us.

Look at the night sky, friends, that big bright moon with twinkling stars, and your very own breath in the cold. And think of the love you may share in this place.

Ukraine Update

The Unitarian Universalist Service Committee (UUSC) is an organization advancing human rights together with an international community of grassroots partners. They describe their work as “grounded in the belief that all people have inherent power and dignity,” close to the first Principle of Unitarian Universalism.

UUSC operates in a crisis by:

1. Establishing and maintaining contact with people to determine the short and long-term needs of affected communities, and listening;
2. Finding groups to partner with on the ground;
3. Finding opportunities for research, education, and advocacy.

Recently, Executive Director Mary Katherine Morn explained how the term “crisis” covers many more years than commonly supposed, since there are long-term aftereffects. In Ukraine, this means years cleaning up rubble, rebuilding infrastructure, mending bodies and minds and lives, etc.

During this winter, Ukraine’s most pressing needs include medicines, clean water, and shelter. There is little internet. Obtaining necessary supplies (such as generators) is difficult. The poor, rural, and undocumented are in the most dire straits. Aid groups report exhaustion and burnout among staff due to the stress of responding to daily emergencies. There is also some anger at some of the larger relief organizations due to a lack of transparency and unclear expectations.

UUSC is concentrating on the most vulnerable communities, including women and children, LGBTQ+, people with disabilities, minority groups such as Roma and Tatars, and non-Ukrainians, such as foreign students. UUSC staff met with feminist groups in Poland and, with their help, identified ten groups with whom UUSC can partner. The goal is to help fund these groups with unrestricted or general support grants (these provide the most flexibility) for about ten years, with long-term commitments. $200,000 has been allocated this year.

These smaller groups are preferred. They are more flexible, they have fewer intermediaries so there can be direct communication with them, and a larger percentage of UUSC resources actually go towards immediate needs.

Disoriented: An Oral History of the Covid Pandemic

Rev. Oscar Sinclair has created an oral history project to help members of religious congregations share their experiences during the Covid pandemic. He invites people to interview one another around six simple questions. The interviewees record their interaction, and the recordings are transcribed to create the script for an audio montage that captures a congregation’s experience. When the montage is shared with their congregation, people begin to understand their shared story, their community’s experience, strength, and hope.

Rev. Sinclair’s work with the Unitarian Church of Lincoln, NE, forms the center of his doctor of ministry dissertation, now under consideration by Wesley Theological Seminary. In preparation for a larger dissemination of the project, Oscar will conduct the project at a congregation in Britain where he will spend a sabbatical. It is hoped that the project will also be conducted at UUCSR where Oscar once served as student minister. He plans to report on this three-congregation project at General Assembly in Pittsburgh, PA, in June 2023.

Members of the UU Congregation at Shelter Rock are invited to join the project after Sunday Services during late January and throughout February. Boxes containing full instructions and recorders will be available to be checked out for your use. Those interested in participating may email Rev. David Carl Olson at dcolson@uucsr.org.

The right of conscience and the use of the democratic process within our congregations and in society at large.

Joining our right of conscience and use of the democratic process with the mission and vision of our Unitarian Universalist faith has always made me very proud. By declaring that we support every individual's own understanding of right and wrong, and belief in governance by the will of the people, Unitarian Universalists take an incredibly brave stand. For all our insistence on the inherent worth of every person and respect for their individual search for spiritual growth, we also put our trust in a process that depends on the will of the majority.

In the time since January 6, 2021, when democracy was literally under attack, our trust in this process is more important than ever. Our denomination encourages each individual to develop a personal faith. Our 5th Principle celebrates the power of the people. Our ability to bring these two visions together is at the core of UUCSR's success.

Our dedication to democracy has often felt frustrating to members of Shelter Rock when the work of the congregation seems to move slowly through committees or past the Board of Trustees. It can feel like creativity and passion are being stifled by the need to have the congregation weigh in and affirm action.

Our wealth allows us to look deeply into the future and dream big. It gives us a freedom to imagine a new and better world. Our faith demands that those ideas need support and affirmation by others before moving forward. And while taking the time to engage other members in our vision may seem stifling at times, the end result of seeking wide support, is what we stand for as UUs.

I am forever grateful for the passion of this congregation and am always amazed at the breadth of ideas that come from it. I hope that never changes and I am confident that our support for the democratic process will never dissuade any member from pushing their passion forward, even if that means taking the time to get committee buy-in and group engagement.

As this new year begins, I want to applaud every member who has stepped up, come together, joined in, and worked hard to keep UUCSR vital and vibrant. I hope the constraints of democracy don't ever hold us back. New ideas are essential to our growth as a congregation and denomination. I encourage all members to initiate discussions at their committee meetings and during Sunday Café about their vision, hope, and passion for Shelter Rock. I hope all members feel free to engage board members and ministers in conversation about their ideas for our congregation. UU's have a reputation for wanting to talk out absolutely everything, then forming task forces to take that talk deeper, and finally engaging the rest of the congregation in even more meaningful conversation. It can feel slow and frustrating and I hope that never ever changes.

The UUCSR Lost and Found bin is located across from the Reception desk on the Lower Level.

Stop by to find things you may not have even known you lost!
The New York Times and The Washington Post ran articles recently following the conclusion of the UN Biodiversity Conference (COP15) in Montreal, held in December 2022. Nearly 200 countries met to address the fact that humans are making the earth unlivable for up to one million different species that now face extinction. The United States is one of the few non-signatories to this event and attended as an observer. How unfortunate!

The main causes of this mass extinction include over-development in the form of increased land taken for agriculture, cattle grazing, the development of cities, towns, and roads. Another human-created scourge—climate change—makes just living hard. Just living will continue to get harder. One of the major goals of this conference was to get signatory countries to commit to saving 30 percent of their land and water in its natural state by 2030. This will give wildlife in all the various ecosystems a chance to recover from the onslaught of human activity.

Let me bring the issue home. I’ve written before on the unique value of the UUCSR woodlands. Our woods moderate local climate; plants siphon atmospheric carbon to grow and release oxygen. The unpaved vegetated earth allows for precipitation to percolate to aquifers replenishing our water supply. Our woods are part of a mottled chain of woodland/open areas that exists on the North Shore of Long Island. This string of golf courses and woodlands act as corridors and places for wildlife to live. These spaces need active protection from development. In late 2021, the St. Ignatius Retreat House on Searingtown Road was sold to developers for $36.5M. Since then, the Gold Coast mansion has been torn down, as have the towering trees on the 33-acre site. Forty-six homes are being built with a price tag aiming at $4M each. Another green sanctuary has been lost to development.

Our woods need active protection and stewardship. We’ve begun by clearing invasive plants from 100 feet of the Great Lawn/forest perimeter. Many of the invasive plants were introduced as botanical specimens (burning bush) and ground cover (English ivy and pachysandra). As non-native plants, they are not a food source for native animals and insects. So they thrive covering the ground and shading out new native plant growth. Removal of non-native plants will be a recurring maintenance expense. Maintenance costs for buildings and grounds is budgeted and does not impact Veatch grants or UUCSR committee funding. Our Seventh Principle calls us to care for the interdependent web of all existence.

The Land Management Plan (download available HERE) recommends the hiring of a professional land manager. The successful candidate would plan and direct land management projects to their completion, choosing the proper vendors, overseeing their work, assisting in grant writing opportunities to help defray costs, and develop religious education programs.

We CAN conserve our small but important piece of our earth.

Dona Nobis Pacem
by Ralph Vaughan Williams
A Plea for Peace in a Time of War
For Soprano and Baritone Soloists, Chorus, and Full Orchestra

When WWI broke out, the 42-year old British composer Ralph Vaughan Williams immediately volunteered for service as an ambulance driver on the front lines where he witnessed unspeakable carnage. He later served as an artillery officer, and the thundering of the machinery of war ultimately severely damaged his hearing. He was deeply affected by these experiences, and after the war, he turned to music to come to terms with all that he had seen. His journey toward healing was interrupted in the 1930s as he watched the rise of fascism with great alarm. Williams was particularly horrified by Italy’s 1935 invasion of Ethiopia, and in 1936 he wrote his cantata, Dona Nobis Pacem (Give Us Peace).

Based on poems by Walt Whitman, political rhetoric, the Bible, and the Catholic Mass, this monumental work is a musical plea for peace.

Members of the congregation and the larger community are encouraged to join the UUCSR Choir as we prepare to sing this very moving work. Rehearsals will take place on Thursday evenings, 7:30–8:30 pm, commencing January 26, 2023.

Who Are the Refugees Among Us?

At the heart of each of the major world religions, and ingrained in the teaching of many of the minor traditions, there is an instruction to welcome the stranger. Following this mandate has never been more important than now. According to the United Nations High Commission on Refugees (UNHCR), at the end of 2021, "89.3 million individuals worldwide were forcibly displaced as a result of persecution, conflict, violence, human rights violations or events seriously disturbing public order."

This global crisis is playing out here among us. Since the Russian invasion of Ukraine, 14,000 Ukrainians have resettled in New York State with 2,111 of them coming to Long Island. Before their arrival, 2,700 refugees from Afghanistan sought refuge in New York with 47 of them coming to Long Island. And according to the New York State Office of Temporary and Disability Assistance (OTDA), during this period, refugees and asylees continued to arrive from other countries, including Burma, Democratic Republic of Congo, Syria, Somalia, Congo, Sudan, Honduras, El Salvador, Guinea, Russia, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Cuba, and Haiti.

The size of the task of assisting this enormous multitude need not discourage us. As both Jewish and Islamic traditions tell us, "Whoever saves one life saves the world."

To begin to address this need, in September 2021, the Social Justice Committee joined Upholding Humanity, a Long Island interfaith group formed specifically to address the resettlement of Afghan and Ukrainian refugees in our local communities. The faith communities that comprise Upholding Humanity are the Islamic Center of Long Island, Temple Sinai of Roslyn, Community Synagogue, St. John’s Episcopal Church, the UJA Federation of New York, and the UUCSR Social Justice Committee. Since its founding it has assisted in the resettlement of seven refugee families.

Over the course of several meetings, committee members considered the great need for support for refugees coming to Long Island. At its December meeting, the Social Justice Committee voted to start the process for a Crisis Grant for refugee resettlement on Long Island. In upcoming weeks, you’ll be asked by committee members to sign a petition in support of this request. When the committee has the signatures of 60 members, the petition will be submitted to the Board of Trustees. If the Board approves the request, an ad hoc group will be formed to vet possible organizations with the goal of presenting the application for a crisis grant for a vote by the Congregation. The need is great but remember: saving one life is saving the world.

Smart Growth Conference

Under the leadership of Eric Alexander, Vision Long Island will hold the 20th Annual Smart Growth Conference in 2023. While the emphasis has been on communities and small business, environmental concerns have come to play a dominant role in recent years. This article is a synopsis of what I learned by attending workshops at the 2022 Smart Growth Conference.

Off-shore wind turbines will be online delivering 1,000 megawatts of electricity to Long Island by 2030. Lithium Battery facilities, with commensurate energy storage capacity, will be in place. Over time, off-shore wind power will increase five-fold.

We shall all be forced to transition to electric cars as automobile manufacturer's discontinue the production of gasoline and diesel vehicles. This means we need more electric charging stations. Accordingly, PSE&G will pay 90 percent of the cost to install any charging station that is available for public use. Next year, PSE&G will change its standard billing to be based on time of day use. (You can opt out to stay with current billing method.)

Over 30,000 homes on Long Island now have rooftop solar panels. It is projected that this will increase to 180,000 in the next three or four years. The full 30 percent federal tax credit has been reinstated to offset installation costs. More importantly, quality solar panels now degrade at a rate well below one percent a year. This means a rooftop system will deliver over 90 percent on its initial output throughout the typical life span of a roof.

Heat pumps are reversible air conditioners. One or more ductless air source units can effectively air condition your home or business all summer at an installation cost comparable to a typical central air system. The drawback of air source heat pumps is that they cannot heat your house when the outside temperature drops below a certain level. That minimum temperature is now single digits Fahrenheit, rendering these units adequate for Long Island.

New York City just passed an All-Electric Building law which applies to new construction. While comparable building practices have not been codified on Long Island, some builders are choosing to do the right thing. This was mentioned in a session on Affordable Housing. For these all-electric dwellings, air source heat pumps provide heating and hot water; induction stoves do the cooking. It is expected that purchase prices and maintenance of all-electric homes will be affordable.

Join our Senior Seminar teens on their Midnight Run on Friday, February 10, 2023! Midnight Run is a volunteer-based organization with a mission to bridge the gap between the housed and those who are experiencing homelessness. Midnight Run coordinates more than 1,000 missions per year where volunteers from churches, synagogues, schools, and other philanthropic groups distribute food, clothing, blankets, and other personal care items to those who are impoverished and/or experiencing homelessness on the streets of New York City.

We are asking for donations, volunteers to prepare food, sort clothing, compile toiletry kits, and volunteers who would like to join Senior Seminar teens on their mission in New York City. A donation bin is in the Main Lobby. A list of needed items to donate can be found HERE! You can contact the Youth and Adult Faith Engagement Coordinator Jamie Walowitz (516.472.2943 or jwalowitz@uucsr.org) if you would like to volunteer or have any questions.

How Could You?
2022 is over! As you may be feeling, I am so grateful to see it end. All the illness, death, Covid, RSV, and the virulent flu. As grateful as I am, I’m aware of unfinished business that unconscionably inflicts enormous hardship on families and children.

The year ended without the 117th Congress extending the expanded child tax credit—unable, unwilling to make a deal to extend the program that kept more than 50 percent of children out of poverty! We know that the government has the power as it was very clearly demonstrated when Congress passed legislation allowing the Agriculture Department to give free meals to all students regardless of income. More money for families allowed them to buy more food. Although it was extended twice, Congress decided it was no longer necessary.

Revamping the child tax credit would have enabled more families to qualify. The program expired. Congress let it happen. How could they? Now, parents have to apply and schools need to adjudicate which families qualify—which children will eat. Some families can’t afford even reduced-price meals and begin to rack up debt. This can lead to children being denied meals.

As a special educator, I encountered many hungry children. I heard other professionals questioning whether particular students should be permitted to have breakfast, even though they traveled long distances and couldn’t eat breakfast at home. I asked how well could the children learn on an empty stomach.

As Pope Francis asked when referring to the struggle of migrants, do we inhabit a culture of indifference? He said he sees the faces of suffering. I don’t think our Congress does. He said that the worst of this is that we are getting used to it—a grave disease. I suspect that Congress may be afflicted by the same disease.

Knowing that the child tax credit had such a profound impact on hunger, reducing food insufficiency for families with children, it pains me that so many again face this hardship. Since the payments ended a year ago, child poverty shot up by 41 percent. Yet the culture of indifference is a disease that continues to afflict our lawmakers. We can be vocal. We can ask our legislators: How Could You?

Alan M Richards: Artist's Statement

My work may be classified as photomontage. It uses multiple photographic images, segments of images, drawings, vectors, or clips that are fused to create a single composite image. The images may be playful, satirical, or of a more serious nature. I try to tell a story with each image. My artwork represents the human condition. It reflects how I view events and the interaction between people and the world.

My work is primarily based on photographic images. I either take the images myself, or I use found/vintage or other images combined with my images. The images are often supplemented by drawings to bring the various elements into a single image.

I look for the unusual in a person or persons. It's not whether a person is fat or skinny, one color or another, or any other physical attribute. It's a special aspect of an individual which makes them appear to me to be special. It's their human quality that attracts me.

I do not have a set pattern about how an image grows. I guess it is organic in that elements of the final image change over the time I'm working on the picture. Sometimes, an entire background will change or elements will be added or deleted. The end goal is to create an image with visual interest. I may start out with some notion of the potential look of the final piece, but that often changes as the piece progresses.

My background is not in the art world. By history, I have a background in science. In particular, I earned a PhD in hearing science and audiology from the City University of New York. I was a professor of hearing science at CUNY for nearly 30 years and had a private practice in audiology on the Upper East Side of Manhattan for over 30 years as well.
