Rev. Jaye Brooks

A Unitarian Universalist Congregation Is a Covenantal Community

Each congregation covenants with other UU congregations to affirm and promote Unitarian Universalist Principles, and each crafts its own covenant among its members.

At Shelter Rock, we re-commit to that covenant every Sunday when we speak together the Words of Affirmation:

Love is the doctrine of this congregation,
The quest for truth is its sacrament,
and service is its prayer.
To dwell together in peace,
To seek knowledge in freedom,
To serve human need—this do we affirm and covenant with each other.

In 2015, Shelter Rock members also created a congregational covenant in a form sometimes called a “behavioral covenant”—because it expresses the behavior to which individual members aspire so that this congregation can truly be a loving religious community. Speaking with kindness, assuming that others have good intentions, “accepting, respecting, and celebrating” difference.

In any group that intends to honor and respect others who think differently, there must be a way to resolve disagreements. The use of established decision-making processes, including voting in congregational meetings, is the basic mechanism that mediates the many different ideas members may have about what is best.

Another means of resolving disagreements is stated in the congregational covenant—and it’s aimed at restoring respectful relationships when a more personal conflict occurs. Members covenant to resolve the issue directly, or through a facilitated conversation. Ministers have the training and experience to facilitate a conversation between members who agree to resolve their differences through that process, and the covenant expressly commits members to this approach. An additional avenue the

The covenant mentions dispute resolution through the Committee on Ministry.

The Committee on Ministry never functioned especially well as a means to reconcile members in conflict. After discussing this issue, and struggling as well with its broader charge, the Committee on Ministry recommended to the Board that the Committee be restructured as a smaller team with the responsibility and authority to facilitate conversations between members seeking to settle their disagreement and restore their relationship.

The Board appointed an ad hoc committee to evaluate this recommendation. That group agreed with the Committee on Ministry and came back to the Board with a specific proposal: To create a Respectful Relationships Team of three members who, with a Minister’s guidance and after appropriate training, would be available to facilitate conversations between members seeking a return to a respectful relationship.

The Respectful Relationships Team’s (RRT) charge, which the Board approved, is based on successful similar teams in other UU congregations. In addition to facilitating conversations, the Team is to recommend workshops and programs that promote compassionate communications and healthy relationships.

Because of the way UUCSR’s Bylaws are structured, the elimination of one committee and the creation of another requires a Bylaws amendment passed by a two-thirds majority vote at a congregational meeting. To fill the gap between now and then, the Board established an ad-hoc committee to be called the Respectful Relationships Team and to function as one pending a Bylaws change. If you are still reading, you have my gratitude. Because two things are now important.

First, the ministers are recruiting RRT members for the Board to appoint. One was appointed at the January Board meeting. The ministers plan to present two more names in February. Anyone who is interested in this role can let any minister know of their interest.

Second, the congregational covenant specifies that if a member refuses to participate in dispute resolution, then that person agrees to “drop the matter and not involve others.” In other words, stop stirring the pot.

This agreement is a powerful, significant commitment to covenantal community. Although the Respectful Relationships Team is still in formation, the ministers are ready and willing to facilitate a conversation between members seeking to return to a respectful relationship. At this moment, we aren’t aware of anyone in need of help to restore their relationship with someone else in the congregation—so the information in this column is decidedly not a disguised plea to un-named members.

Instead, it is my expression of hope. It’s my public admiration for Shelter Rock’s development toward a better way to create loving religious community. Celebrate with me—in the words of UU minister and poet Rev. Theresa Soto—this progress “by covenant and the movement forward of one right action and the next.”

With hope for the future,
Rev. Jaye

Milestones

Oral History Project

When you tell the story of the last three years, where do you start? That’s the first question people ask each other in our Oral History project. What is an image from Covid and our response that sticks with you?

On Sundays after services, people willing to ask those questions of another member of our community are welcome to sit with the Oral History Project. We’ll pair people off so that they may share some time together, answering questions about the last three years, and sharing their own experiences.

Rev. Oscar Sinclair and Rev. David Carl Olson are cooperating on collecting these stories. Oral History Project “kits”—with clear instructions and a simple audio recorder—will be distributed each week for people who are willing to have a conversation. The kits will be at a table in the Main Lobby, and Rev. Olson or a volunteer will be available to help pair people and to answer any questions.

What role did the UU Congregation at Shelter Rock play for you during the pandemic? This and other questions will help us imagine together the ways this congregation is creating communities in the building, in the organization, and in its online presence.

Rev. Olson will share with the congregation some of the things that we discover. Rev. Sinclair hopes to take the experiences of his congregation in Nebraska and add those of the congregation he is serving temporarily during a sabbatical in England. With what we learn at Shelter Rock, we will share our conclusions at the Unitarian Universalist Association General Assembly in June, 2023 in Pittsburgh, PA.

Ministering To and With Each Other in Small Groups

The Living Tradition of Unitarian Universalism asserts the priesthood of all believers. When it comes to acts of ministry, we all do it all the time!

The ministry of Small Groups is dedicated to building relationships within our congregation that grow in intimacy by sharing about ultimacy. People talk about “the big questions” of life. What does it mean to belong? How do we experience change in our lives? What’s Love got to do, got to do with it?

The ministry of Small Groups happens in a variety of ways, from groups that form around a table on a Sunday after the service, to a midweek experience online, or to other ways that we are open to exploring. What is required is a commitment of a small group to show up for one another once or twice a month (depending on the group), and to share honestly in the ministry of listening and presence.

If you are interested in joining a small group or in being trained to facilitate a small group, please contact Rev. Olson (dcolson@uucsr.org or 516.761.9478).

One theorist said, “Small groups are not a program of the religious congregation, they ARE the religious congregation.” By this practice, people new to the congregation find their way into the center of congregational life. By this practice, the spiritual dimension of our congregation is profoundly amplified for each participant.

A Message from the President

Although it is a new year on the calendar, January is a midpoint for us at UUCSR. The boards, committees, task forces and leadership teams have already been meeting and planning for many months and both the business and programs of Shelter Rock are moving ahead.

But there are still many ways that members can get involved with and join into community at the congregation. There are still open positions on most committees but there are also short term ways that you can support UUCSR.

If commitment to a committee seems just too time consuming for you right now, I would like to recommend a way that every member can help the congregation have a meaningful time of fellowship on Sunday after service.

The Sunday Cafe needs volunteers every week to prep, serve, and clean up lunch. It is clear that the opportunity to share a light meal with other members after Sunday service is important and popular because over 50 people stay to eat each week. The tables in the Social Hall are filled with conversation both serious and light-hearted over a simple lunch.

When the BOT envisioned the Cafe being organized by different committees every week, we were forgetting those members not on a committee who still want to participate but can only do so in a limited way. So now, there will be a sign-up sheet in the Main Lobby for any member who would like to give an hour or so on Sunday to help before or after the Cafe and get a free lunch compliments of the BOT. Many members who have already helped out these past few months have said the experience was great fun and a terrific way to meet new friends.

If you are interested in participating in a deeper way but also for a limited time, I recommend that you think about being part of the next Ministerial Search Committee. Rev. Jaye Brooks will be departing UUCSR in July and the BOT is organizing a search committee to find a minister to join Rev. Olson under the leadership of Rev. Dr. Fenimore. Five at-large members from the congregation will join Trustees Chris Hilke and Ursula Salamone in the search which will begin immediately and end in May. It is important work that combines both the spiritual and business issues of the congregation. If you are interested, please send your name to Tammy at twell@uucsr.org.

Being in community at UUCSR doesn’t always have to mean joining a committee, although their work is the backbone of this congregation. But everyone’s lives are different and our time is precious so even if you can’t commit to a long-term project at Shelter Rock, I hope you will consider a limited way to be in fellowship. See you Sunday.

Suzanne de Oliveira

I try to avoid looking forward or backward, and try to keep looking upward.

Charlotte Bronte

Suzanne learned of Soulful Sundown from John Platt on WFUV and since then has attended as many Soulful Sundown Services as possible.

Born in Forest Hills, she has spent the last 30 years in Great Neck. She enjoys live music and live theater, animal rescue, arts, antiquing, nature, crafts, gardening and meditation. Suzanne currently shares her home with her 28-year-old son, Joshua.

Joining Shelter Rock was not a quick decision for Suzanne. She took her time poking around ways that she might be involved in the community as a retired woman with diverse interests. It took a few years, but eventually Suzanne decided to make a commitment to UUCSR as her spiritual home. She said, “I came to love the UU and the idea of a spiritual home where I could grow and become a better human.”

Today, Suzanne uses the UUCSR website calendar to learn about programs open to the public. She’s attended Ethical Eating classes, LGBTQ+, Green Sanctuary Committee, Men’s Group events, and the Soulful Songs and Stories series, plus volunteers for Midnight Run. An intrepid spirit, she’ll continue to investigate programs that pop up on the calendar. Please consider a special invitation to Suzanne if you’re looking for a thoughtful, committed program participant.

Access to Nature Is a Social Justice Issue

In my observations on the need for active land management here at UUCSR, I often focus on our Seventh Principle, “respect for the interdependent web of all existence of which we are a part.” UUCSR woods, especially, plays host to a large complex web of life. The Land Management Leadership Team, building upon the work of the Green Sanctuary and Buildings and Grounds Committees is fostering a comprehensive Land Management Program for adoption here at UUCSR.

Humans have been increasingly dismal stewards of the Earth since the dawn of the industrial revolution. Rachael Carson warned of the dangers of pollution in the 1950s. Oil company scientists understood the perils of climate change decades ago. Their findings were covered up by corporate (mis)management. I strongly believe that humanity owes it to future generations of all life on Earth to be better land managers. Selfishness plays a big part here, too. We are fouling our only planet to our own mortal peril. There is no Earth 2.0.

Rev. Dr. Natalie Fenimore recently reminded me that the care of our property is not only a conservation issue, it is also a social justice issue—the basis of our Second Principle, “justice, equity, and compassion in human relations.”

Having access to a mature woodland means having access to cleaner air with less small particle pollutants that are responsible for disease (asthma) and premature death of thousands every year. Mature tree cover moderates summer’s high temperatures—again not just a comfort issue—but increasingly a significant health concern. Woodland walks have proven physical and psychological benefits. So where does social justice come in? It turns out that while urban and suburban communities have less access to nature generally, economically disadvantaged communities have even less access. Financially disadvantaged neighborhoods tend to have fewer trees and less park access. With denser living conditions, and maybe less free time, many who could benefit from a walk in the woods lack the equal opportunity.

Our congregation is blessed to have both a mature oak tulip tree forest and a legacy Gold Coast garden. Even if only observing the grounds from inside our buildings, many of the congregation take comfort seeing the greenery and knowing it is there. It is hoped that the newly configured patio off the Main Lobby will draw more people outdoors. Stay tuned for its official opening this spring. A 2016 research report by Austin & Williams commissioned by UUCSR observes that “the 100-acres of park-like property on which UUCSR resides is a truly natural asset that differentiates the congregation.” Our property is a draw that can provide a balm for the soul. Enhancing our commitment championing social justice, we could do more to invite community members and neighboring groups to walk our grounds. Come for a guided walk—maybe get to know us. What groups might benefit from some balm to their souls? Have suggestions? Let us know.

Congregational Forum on Sustainable Land Management Statement

Thursday, February 2, 2023 | 7:00 PM | via Zoom

This Forum will provide an opportunity to members of the Congregation to hear from the Land Management Leadership Team (LMLT) on a proposed Congregational Sustainable Land Management Statement. The Statement is intended to be brought to a vote of the congregation at the March 19, 2023 Congregational Meeting and will help shape congregational decisions on the stewardship of the Shelter Rock property and the Congregation’s commitment to environmental sustainability. The LMLT welcomes member input on the Statement in advance of the Congregational Meeting.

Excerpt from the Statement:

A strongly believe that humanity owes it to future generations of all life on Earth to be better land managers. Selfishness plays a big part here, too. We are fouling our only planet to our own mortal peril. There is no Earth 2.0.

Excerpt from the Statement:

Active management of the UUCSR land resources in an environmentally sustainable way can serve as a model for ethical land stewardship in the 21st century. In making decisions about that land resource, our congregation will consider the following questions prior to making any decisions:

- Are there other ecologically viable alternatives to this decision?
- How does this decision respect the present and future integrity of the land?
- How does this decision preserve the soil, water, air, and species of the land?
- Have we collaborated with others who will be affected by the decision?

The Communities not Cages Campaign also has ambitious goals. A perusal of headlines, news stories, and other media coverage might lead one to believe that more police, longer prison sentences, and harsh imposition of bail leads to community safety. Is there another way to look at this? Legislators in Albany and advocates for thoughtful and humane reforms are looking at the issue through a more nuanced lens. They believe that meeting people’s needs for food, shelter, education, mental health resources, and jobs play a big role in making all of us safe. Add to that the fair application of just laws and true rehabilitation in our jails and prisons, and true community safety need not be just a dream.

What are the tools that legislators and advocates are using? The current menu of legislation offers insight. Let’s start with the 13th Forward Campaign. According to this campaign, “An insidious form of slavery still exists in New York State. The 13th Amendment ended chattel slavery, but with an insidious exception: ‘as a punishment for a crime.’ This loophole has allowed New York to build a prison system so dependent on human exploitation and degradation that it is akin to modern day slavery.”

This ambitious effort aims to pass a constitutional amendment that would abolish slavery in all its forms in New York State. The 13th Amendment ended chattel slavery, but with an insidious exception: ‘as a punishment for a crime.’ This loophole has allowed New York to build a prison system so dependent on human exploitation and degradation that it is akin to modern day slavery.”

The Communities not Cages Campaign also has ambitious goals. This effort includes a package of bills: Eliminate Mandatory Minimums Act (S.7871-Myrie/A.9166-Meeks), the Second Look Act (S.7872-Salazar/A.8894-Walker) to allow judges to review and reconsider excessive sentences; and the Earned Time Act (S.7873A-Cooney/A.8462B-Kelles) to strengthen and expand "good time" and 'merit time' laws to encourage personal transformation in prison and reunite families. In the words of the campaign, "We are fighting to win legislation that will decarcerate New York's prisons, interrupt the abusive power of prosecutors, and build the power of Black, brown, working class and poor communities most impacted by injustices within the criminal legal system."

The questline of The Release Aging People in Prison (RAPP) campaign pretty much sums up their mission: "If the risk is low let them go." Their legislation includes The Fair & Timely Parole Act (S7514/A4231A) which would create a fairer parole determination process that looks to who a person is today, and The Elder Parole Bill (S15A/A8855) which would create opportunities for case-by-case consideration for parole release for people classified by DOCCS as older adults who have served at least 15 consecutive years on their current sentence.

What these campaigns have in common is the belief that by decarcerating our jails and prisons, making "punishment" truly rehabilitative, and investing instead in our Black, Latino, and low-wealth communities, we can promote genuine community safety, community control and collective wellbeing.

I am pleased to report that there are over 300 members and their family members in the secure online Directory.

Full participation will make the Directory especially valuable. If you have not responded to your invitation to join the Directory, please find your email from “no-reply@planningcenteronline.com on behalf of Jennifer Sappell (The Unitarian Universalist Congregation at Shelter Rock (UUCSR)” OR visit uucsr.org and click on MYUUCSR. Follow the instructions to log in using your mobile phone (preferred) or your email address.

You are also invited to download the UUCSR membership database’s mobile app where you may access the directory via your mobile device in addition to the web version on the MYUUCSR section of the congregation’s website.

You will be able to call, text or email another member directly through the app, update your member profile and access your congregational group’s resources among other functionality. The app is called Church Center (sorry we can’t change it to Congregation Center). Below are links for both Android and Apple (iOS) users.

Special Help Available
If you have any questions on how to download the app or about the congregational Directory please feel free to contact Monica Schlichting, Claudia Barbey or Carol Klitzner. All are members of the Membership Committee and are happy to assist. Additionally, this group will be onsite on Sunday, January 29 at a table in the Social Hall before and after Service to assist with sign-ups and downloads. Or contact Jen Sappell (jsappell@uucsr.org).

Dona Nobis Pacem by Ralph Vaughan Williams
A Plea for Peace in a Time of War
For Soprano and Baritone Soloists, Chorus, and Full Orchestra

When WWI broke out, the 42-year old British composer Ralph Vaughan Williams immediately volunteered for service as an ambulance driver on the front lines where he witnessed unspeakable carnage. He later served as an artillery officer, and the thundering of the machinery of war ultimately severely damaged his hearing. He was deeply affected by these experiences, and after the war, he turned to music to come to terms with all that he had seen. His journey toward healing was interrupted in the 1930s as he watched the rise of fascism with great alarm. Williams was particularly horrified by Italy’s 1935 invasion of Ethiopia, and in 1936 he wrote his cantata, Dona Nobis Pacem (Give Us Peace).

Based on poems by Walt Whitman, political rhetoric, the Bible, and the Catholic Mass, this monumental work is a musical plea for peace.

Members of the congregation and the larger community are encouraged to join the UUCSR Choir as we prepare to sing this very moving work. Rehearsals will take place on Thursday evenings, 7:30–8:30 PM, commencing January 26, 2023.

TECH’n Talk
A Monthly Series of Meetings
Hosted by the UUCSR Men’s Group
Speaking from Our Meaningful Experiences with Technology

A True Human Story with a Technology Setting
Tuesday, February 14, 2023
7:00 PM | via Zoom

Join the Men’s Group monthly for the Tech ’n Talk online program.

Mars Mission (possibly 2042) and Lunar Landing (1969), featuring and hosted by Gerry Matusiewicz and Herb Klitzner.

Gerry Jalazo created an analog computer program for astronaut training by Grumman and NASA to simulate the landing. Gerry worked for Grumman Corp. at that time.

In the first half of our program, Gerry Matusiewicz will interview Gerry Jalazo about his Grumman-NASA experiences in preparing for the 1969 landing.

In the second half, the three of us will describe and discuss the proposed Mars Mission:
• its formidable scientific obstacles (no gravity, radiation, social factors in a long trip); its benefits;
• its political controversies.

Join the discussion! Join the online meeting HERE

Required Attire
During the time I was trying to find chalk and science books for my class of sixth-grade special ed students, the mayor cited a need for school uniforms. Although 75 percent of students qualified for free lunch, uniforms were required by the New York City Board of Education. That was a long time ago. However, we see required dress today not only in schools, but in the Olympic games, beauty pageants, and in the Missouri Legislature.

USA Today reported that for Olympic games, women's beach handball athletes are required to wear bikini bottoms with a maximum side width of 10 centimeters—smaller than the size of an iPhone! "If there was any kind of advantage to having little fabric, the men would be wearing them too," said Charlene Weaving, professor and chair of human kinetics department at St. Francis Xavier University in Canada. "If there was any kind of biomechanical advantage, then men would be in Speedos. But they're not." Athletes need functional performance garments. But instead, sexism found its way into sports—via athletes' uniforms.

The Guardian reported the story of a woman who died after being beaten by morality police for wearing an allegedly loose hijab. Mahsa Amini, a 22-year-old Kurd, died after "violent arrest" amid Iranian crackdown on women's dress. In street protests, some women tore off their mandatory headscarves. Videos showed two women throwing their hijabs into a bonfire. Another woman is seen cutting off her hair in a show of protest. Many died.

The New York Times did a story on the 71st Miss Universe competition. Supposedly, the pageant strives for seriousness, interviewing women about world peace and domestic policy. But contestants are there as eye candy. They create programming that sells products. Although they distinguished themselves according to their country of origin, the festival is one of uniformity. They are tall, slim, have long eyelashes, and perfect teeth, poured into skin-tight, revealing dresses with stiletto heels. How does this amount to anything serious or to promoting world peace?

The Missouri State House of Representatives revised its dress code for female legislators requiring them to wear a jacket. It was criticized as sexist and pointless by some Democratic lawmakers. The initiator of these new rules claimed that they are essential to maintain a formal and professional atmosphere. One wonders whether we might find the need for morality police to enforce these rules. State Representative Ashley Aune said, “You know what it feels like to have a bunch of men in this room looking at your top trying to decide whether it’s appropriate or not?” What about the real issues that this body needs to address?

If one's attire could ensure professionalism, how can we explain the behavior of other members of our legislative bodies who supported the January 6 insurrection, etc.? If one's attire could improve poor-performing schools, why haven't they? It seems to me that it's time to focus on real issues, rather than scrutinizing and policing the attire of women.
This article demonstrates the congregation’s stewardship of the Earth and commitment to the Seventh Principle.

The Promise of Hope for the Planet

We are living in a time of climate change. It has caused worldwide disasters and the disappearance of thousands of species. Floods, droughts, wildfires, extreme heat, drought, and pollution of our air and water, as well as soil depletion. As long as the burning of fossil fuels continues and is not abated by corporations and governments unwilling to make real commitments as promised, we are on the path to destruction. Yet there is hope, as we take a closer look at the new shaping of reality.

Nowadays, most people recognize and accept the fact that the climate crisis is real. When they live on an island or on a low coastal area, they are experiencing first-hand rising sea levels and horrific storms. On land, many have suffered from mega-fires or drought. But as new energy sources (clean renewable energy ones) are developed and sold more cheaply than fossil fuels, the decline of greenhouse gases provides goals that build hope.

In the US, part of the new infrastructure bill is Recovering America's Wildlife Act. This game-changing legislation invests $1.4 billion to keep more species from extinction or endangerment. This is vital. Without biodiversity, our interconnected web of life will perish. Climate change has caused threats to biodiversity such as disease and invasive species, causing unsupportable environments for animals and other creatures. State wildlife action funds will receive money from this fund to be devoted to conservation projects. More importantly, recognized tribes in the US will get money to save wildlife, plant species, and help protect air, water, land, and food sources. On June 14, 2022, H.R.2273 passed in the House, giving leadership to Tribal conservation. It is hoped that the Senate will do similarly.

At UUCSR, we would like to implement a Wildlife Management Plan to assure sustainability for our acreage and biodiversity. These are positive actions and goals.

Positive goals can be accomplished when people support them. We can move forward with like-minded people. Join support groups that endorse and work for a greener, healthier environment; become inspired and also inspire others toward positive change. Together we redress grievances, injustices, and work to build a transformational environmental policy. Together we can work with politicians to pass laws protecting humans, biodiversity, and our Earth from further harm. This is our responsibility and the promise of hope to have a brighter future.
