All You Need Is Love!

While the Beatles song is lovely and catchy and optimistic, it is not really true.

People do need love—but also—food and water and shelter and healthcare and justice and peace.

Love is expressed not only as an emotional state but as an action—as a series of actions throughout our lives.

We can give our thoughts and prayers for Asian communities living in fear of violence and attacks. We can be shocked and overwhelmed by the upsurge of antisemitism. We can weep for victims of gun violence. We can feel sympathy, anger, and pain with the family of Tyre Nichols and other Black people who are victims of police violence. But our love is most fully expressed when we also work for justice—when we work for changes that protect and affirm life.

As part of the review of Article 2 of the Unitarian Universalist Association bylaws, this wording is being considered as central to the purpose of our faith: The purpose of the Unitarian Universalist Association is to actively engage its members in the transformation of the world through liberating love.

We can also ask:
• What does liberating love look like in this congregation?
• How might we define and determine transformation?
• How might we let more people know of UUCSR’s efforts and commitments to engage in liberating love?

For Black History Month, we remember these words of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.:

Only through an inner spiritual transformation do we gain the strength to fight vigorously the evils of the world in a humble and loving effort.

From Strength to Love

A Message from the President

This month, the Board of Trustees will use our retreat to have a deeper conversation around membership. It is certainly not a new focus for discussion at UUCSR because our understanding of what it means to be a member at Shelter Rock is that it is in a perpetual state of change.

During the 30 years that I have been a part of UUCSR, the meaning of my being a member has changed, and changed, and changed again. I first drove up that long winding driveway on a Sunday morning as the guest of a friend who thought I might connect with both the mission of Unitarian Universalism and the community of members. I was a young-ish parent with small children and part of a mixed, and as I have always described it, a mixed-up, religious family. I was immediately drawn to the message of the Principles and felt gratitude to the members of RE who were far better equipped to introduce the universe of religious tenets to my daughters. As we all got older and my girls pursued other connections, my interest in women’s issues, music, and community outreach kept me involved in the committee and Board work of the congregation, and my times as a UUCSR delegate to the larger denomination at General Assembly grew my ever-deepening faith.

I think my journey as a UU may be very similar to many of yours. It is both personal and universal and ebbs and flows along with everything else going on in our lives. A deep conversation on membership at UUCSR must include a recognition that not all members see their connection to the congregation in the same way, at the same time. That means that the leadership at Shelter Rock is always trying to offer ways to participate that appeal to a large variety of wants and needs. But we are also very aware that we need to see ourselves as one community, joined together in a shared vision of what UUCSR means.

Who are we? What is our personality?

Are we still the congregation that was originally organized by and for young families to have a place for their children to learn about Unitarian Universalism? Are we still a congregation that attracts and welcomes new people to our building and grounds to hear prominent speakers?

Our membership is substantially smaller now than it was 30 years ago and that has translated into fewer children in Religious Education (RE). Our aging membership and the ability to offer Zoom participation at almost every level of congregational activity means there are far fewer in-person events. Our 5-Year Strategic Plan reflects the desire of our present congregation to have more intimate and spiritual experiences. Rather than “entertaining” our neighbors in the outside community, members want to reach out more to those around us who are in need and to our other Long Island congregations as partners.

In answer to these new ideas, we are beginning to rebrand Friday Nights at Shelter Rock as a time for members to come together in conversation and spirituality and we are opening up participation in our Memorial Day Retreat to our neighboring congregations.

Although the use of the building by members has diminished, the vision for our outside property has grown in importance.

Understanding that the youth are our future, we try to always look for ways to engage young families at UUCSR but we are also working to broaden our ability to keep members involved who can’t be onsite. We hope to remain a beacon of UU values in our larger community and to sustain a more visible presence at outside events.

I urge you, as always, to let the Board of Trustees know of any ideas you have on the ever-changing meaning of membership at Shelter Rock. Your journey at UUCSR is the most important piece of our story.

Membership Matters

Becoming a member of the Congregation is an important milestone in your spiritual journey. Members affirm and promote the Unitarian Universalist Principles at Shelter Rock. We covenant and agree to work alongside each other in search of spiritual growth.

With great pleasure, I wish to introduce one of our newest members. Please join me in wishing Clayton a most sincere welcome!

Clayton Martorello

Let me begin by saying that I believe I have been a Unitarian Universalist since the early years of my life. However, Danielle and I came to the Hollis Unitarian Church (HUC) in 1976, when our two boys, Fabrice and Raphael, were four- and two-years old. We have been UUs ever since joining HUC in 1976. I attended Pace University when it was still a college in the mid to late seventies, attaining both bachelors and masters degrees in Economics.

The major bulk of my worklife was with Westvaco Corporation, a major paper manufacturer, for 24 years. I was employed as a senior industrial credit analyst in the treasury department. Westvaco was headquartered in NYC with major paper mills located in the mid-Atlantic and southern states. I took early retirement in 1997.

Danielle and I spent 41 wonderful years together until her passing in 2009. Recently, I have enjoyed being with my dear friend Shirley, whom Danielle and I met when we joined HUC in 1976.

I enjoy writing from time to time. I even published a book on Amazon in 2019 titled, 628 Avenue V. It is about family life in Brooklyn’s Gravesend neighborhood dating back to the early 20th century. I also have a collection of vignettes that were published under “Clay’s Corner in Hollis and Beyond,” a monthly bulletin of HUC.

I also like watching sports, PBS Masterpiece Mystery, reading good books and the New Yorker, cooking good healthy food, and participating in good conversation.

Combating Forever Chemicals

Our water pollution problem on Long Island is not an isolated one. It is besieged by “forever chemicals.” Known scientifically as per-polyfluoroalkyl (PFAS) and 1.4 dioxane, they appear to stick around forever. They are in paint strippers, dyes, deodorants, and plastics. They cause health problems: from damage to the immune system to cancer. Whether or not they can be eliminated has become an essential task for our current systems and providers of water.

Some companies are trying to reduce “forever chemicals” in their products. Cups, bowls, and egg cartons produced by Zume, a manufacturer of food containers and other products, launched in April 2022, no longer possess harmful waste. Other companies are also making similar changes, including some clothing companies that are eliminating chemicals in their garments.

In Nassau County, the 1.4 dioxane problem found in potable water is finally being addressed. Places like Carle Place, Mineola, Plainview, Bethpage, and Hicksville have Island water providers cleaning up the water using the New York State $250 million grant to purchase equipment that eliminates this chemical. But this advanced oxidation process can cost up to $60 million for even one area. In Hicksville, it’ll take three years for one system to be installed. In each town, these will be slow, ongoing costly infrastructure projects. Water bills will rise. It is a cheap price to pay for eliminating negative health impacts on humans and other creatures, but a good way to save our wetlands, bays, coastal areas, and oceans from pollution!

In Suffolk County, the lack of sewers and abundance of cesspools and septic tanks is finally center-stage. Money from the state, $1.2 million, will help to replace faulty septic systems with I/A (Innovative Alternative), low-nitrogen systems. Nitrogen from fertilizers will no longer suffocate ponds and other areas. If new septic tanks are needed, the Suffolk County Department of Health will provide a broad range of help. The Forge River Sewer Project in the Shirley-Mastic area will help eliminate 1,889 cesspools and install a new water treatment plant by 2025.

These infrastructure projects will raise the water bills of Long Islanders. They are needed and should be viewed as a good investment eliminating pollution of our underground aquifers and lovely island surroundings. “Forever chemicals” can be eliminated by companies removing chemicals in their products along with state and federal aid. This offers a healthier future for everyone.

Ponds on Our Property

Even though I was a biology major in college, read the Science Times religiously, and keep up with news on climate change and environmental issues, I have found that I had a lot to learn about UUCSR’s partially landscaped and partially wooded 100 acres.

I would like to share what I’ve learned about UUCSR’s ponds from a study commissioned by the Buildings and Grounds and the Green Sanctuary Committees. The study returned a 130-page Land Management Plan that included Information about two ponds on our property: a vernal pond and an artificial, concrete-lined one.

Who knew we had a vernal pond! In fact, what is a vernal pond? It is a special type of wetland. It is a seasonal or temporary fresh water pond. Usually, it is a small depression in the ground that each year fills up with water from the snowfall melt, the spring rains, and the rising of the water table after winter. It generally dries up by late summer.

Since the pond dries up each year, it is not possible for fish to live there. This creates a very good habitat for amphibians like salamanders and frogs, some native plants, and some insects and birds. Various species of frogs, toads, and salamanders use the pond for reproduction. They live most of the year on the forest floor under the leaf mulch close to the pond. As the soil warms in the spring, they migrate (i.e., walk over) to the vernal pond. Here they mate and lay their eggs in the water. The eggs hatch in the water, and some months later the juveniles leave the pond, not coming back until the next spring to breed.

The area surrounding a vernal pond is, therefore, critical for these species to survive. In NYS, several amphibian species are endangered by loss of this habitat. Vernal ponds and wetlands in general are in steep decline due to development, road building, and pollution. The communities that thrive vernal ponds are in serious jeopardy.

We have another pond on the property which is visible from the Main Building, Veatch House Patio, and lawn. It is a beautiful small pond, has a lovely cascading waterfall leading to it, and a fountain in the center. There is a walkway around it leading into the woods and a bench near it to sit and ponder. It is a very peaceful place.

Each year, the concrete-lined pond tends to become green with algae fed by nutrients such as goose droppings. Some algae are toxic and need to be controlled, usually with copper sulfide which binds to phosphorus and sequesters it at the bottom of the pond. Converting the concrete pond to a natural water body and fighting algae growth by planting desirable aquatic species to help cleanse the water are under investigation.

UUCSR’s property is amazing. I am glad to have learned about its unique value to the natural world and to be able to share it with my congregation.

February Is Black History Month

Each year, the Association for the Study of Negro Life and History (ASNLH) chooses a theme for Black History Month and, in 2023, it is “Resistance.”

One way to explore the theme of resistance is to visit the National Museum of African American History and Culture (NMAAHC) in Washington, DC. While a trip to the nation’s capital may not be possible, their website provides the next best thing to an in-person visit.

Curators have organized their exhibits for the month around the ways that African Americans practice resistance: A Tradition of Activism; Foundations of Faith; The Value of Education; The Black Press; and Leaning into Black Joy. According to the curators, “Black resistance not only encompasses rebellions, protests, and uprisings—but also the beauty, love, and pride of joyous everyday living. Black joy lives in those who dare to love themselves, their families and their communities. Black joy is the smiles and laughter of children, the courtships, love, marriage rituals, fellowships, foodways, and family pride.”

Within this exhibit, there is the series, “You Should Know,” with topics such as “Black Actresses Who Refused to Be Typecast”; “Traveling Through Jim Crow America”; and “African American Chefs You Should Know.” Along with text, each section is illustrated with photos of objects from the museum’s collection. For example, in “Traveling Through Jim Crow America,” a copy of the Negro Motorist Green Book is displayed. “This was a guidebook for African American travelers that provided a list of hotels, boarding houses, taverns, restaurants, service stations, and other establishments throughout the country that served African American patrons. The information included in the Green Book helped increase their safety and treatment.”

The section, Leaning into Black Joy, is a moving testimony to the resilience of African American people. From the website, “When people live in a world that devalues them because they are black or brown as well as dismisses their contributions to the larger society, Black Joy is and has been an effective tool that has allowed individuals and groups to shift the impact of negative narratives and events in their favor.” This section also includes a video of a conversation between All Things Considered weekend host Michel Martin, and podcast host Tracey Lewis-Giggetts. Their conversation is heartfelt and eloquent.

While there are many in-person special events at the museum, there are others that are online only. There’s a series for children, NMAAHC Kids Learning Together that includes Celebrating Encanto’s Antonio; Celebrating Frozone! Celebrating Princess Tiana! and Celebrating Doc McStuffins! Another online event is A Space for Us All. On Friday, February 10, 2023, the NMAAHC and NASA will host middle and high school students to join them virtually for an educational experience where they will examine and build on the legacy of achievement, connection, and knowledge of African Americans at NASA. The program will be available on the website at a later date.

While Black History Month is a time to celebrate the fullness of African American history and culture, it cannot be restricted to only one month.

Veatch Grantee Gives a Call To Action

On Veatch Sunday, Dorian Warren, Co-President of Community Change, placed the important work of his organization within the context of a movement to create a multiracial democracy that stretches back generations. Progress, he reminded us, is always followed by backlash. The fruits of the Civil Rights Movement during the 1960s, which Dorian described as a “second reconstruction,” did not come without setbacks and bloodshed. Today, as the country continues to reel from the suffering and death of Tyre Nichols at the hands of Memphis police, Dorian reminded us that our work is far from over.

Dorian issued a call to action to the congregation to “connect” to one another in the “communities we call home” and to “recommit” to the Veatch Program. “The organizations that this congregation supports are on the frontlines of the existential threats that this country is facing.”

After a lunch sponsored by the Veatch Board of Governors, Afua Atta-Mensah, Chief of Programs at Community Change, joined for the Veatch Annual Meeting. Veatch Executive Director Joan Minieri interviewed Afua about what brought her to her work as an organizer, strategist, and movement lawyer dedicated to dismantling systemic racism. Afua spoke to what is currently at stake in our country, and how grassroots community organizing—the work of Veatch grantees—is building a movement to strengthen our multiracial democracy. From her travel around the country to places that recently included Florida and New Mexico, as well as right here in New York State, Afua emphasized the difference that long-term support from the Veatch Program has made in sustaining community leaders to build power, from the ground up.

You are welcome to watch the Veatch Sunday Worship Service HERE.
A Phoenix in the Main Lobby!

As many of you know, last year the Bookstore Committee and our congregation lost a wonderful friend, Robin Finnan-Jones. Robin’s dedication and enthusiasm were integral to the UUCSR Bookstore, and she is missed terribly. We will do our best to channel her commitment towards making the Bookstore a valuable part of our congregation.

In addition to books on UUCSR history, theology, poetry, feminism, and LGBTQ+ rights, the Bookstore also carries a curated selection of children’s books. One particular “staff favorite” is Just Help! How to Build a Better World, by Sonia Sotomayor. Sonia Sotomayor was raised in Bronx, NY, and would become the first Latina appointed to the Supreme Court. Based on Justice Sotomayor’s own childhood, Just Help! How to Build a Better World, tells the story of a day in the life of young Sonia. Readers follow Sonia throughout her day as she responds to her mother’s daily question, “How will you help today?” The day in the story happens to be election day, and Sonia finds no shortage of helpers and, along the way, discovers the connectivity of them all.

In the coming months, committee members will be working on updating the store—complete with a new name, a new layout, new inventory, new UUCSR merchandise, and new items to give yourself or others (of course, books make wonderful gifts!). The Committee is open to suggestions and requests (not to mention volunteers), so please don’t be shy about stopping by and letting us know how we can best serve you.

Bookstore FAQs

Do you take credit cards?

YES! We accept cash, checks, and all major credit cards.

Socially Responsible Investment (SRI) News

Envest Microfinance is an SRI loan recipient. Below is another Envest Microfinance success story featured in a newsletter—this time to provide a Kenyan woman with a healthier, cleaner alternative to her current environmentally dangerous process.

Among her many children and grandchildren, Achieng, who lives outside of Kisumu in Western Kenya, is used to cooking for a big family. She used to spend many hours a day cooking over charcoal to feed them all. The charcoal made her lungs feel dirty and caused her to cough.

As a member of Jipange Women’s Group, a borrower group of a microfinance institution called Rafode, Achieng was able to purchase a fuel-efficient cook stove (jiko) on credit, at an interest rate she could afford with her income. The jiko burned wood efficiently, producing far less smoke than the charcoal she used previously. A bonus was that the jiko converted heat from the stove into electricity that powered a USB port. Achieng could use this electricity to charge her phone or to power a small light that enabled her to see what she was cooking at night. Even in the first weeks of using the jiko, Achieng noticed that her lungs felt cleaner and she had more energy. She would not have been able to make the $84 purchase without access to credit.

When we think about microfinance, we often think of loans that are used to expand small businesses. While this is often the case, Achieng’s story is just as common. At the lower end of the economic spectrum, many people, and especially women, lack credit for even a modest purchase. This can make basic quality of life improvements, such as a jiko, out of reach. It is critically important that Achieng obtained her loan from a registered microfinance institution, as opposed to a local loan shark. The microfinance institution reviewed her application for credit and ensured that she was able to afford the payments before issuing a loan.

Envest Microfinance Fund, LLC provides loans to microfinance institutions, which in turn provide loans to borrowers like Achieng. Currently Envest lends to 20 microfinance institutions in 11 countries. Envest tends to partner with small, locally grown microfinance institutions and is often the first foreign lender to partner with them.

The estimated gap between the supply and demand for credit remains enormously high—on the order of $300 billion. Jon Bishop founded Envest in 2006 as a vehicle which could scale to meet the credit gap. Every dollar that is invested through Envest is used to make loans to microfinance institutions like Rafode, who make loans to women like Achieng.
A Plea for Peace in a Time of War
For Soprano and Baritone Soloists, Chorus, and Full Orchestra

When WWI broke out, the 42-year old British composer Ralph Vaughan Williams immediately volunteered for service as an ambulance driver on the front lines where he witnessed unspeakable carnage. He later served as an artillery officer, and the thundering of the machinery of war ultimately severely damaged his hearing. He was deeply affected by these experiences, and after the war, he turned to music to come to terms with all that he had seen. His journey toward healing was interrupted in the 1930s as he watched the rise of fascism with great alarm. Williams was particularly horrified by Italy’s 1935 invasion of Ethiopia, and in 1936 he wrote his cantata, Dona Nobis Pacem (Give Us Peace).

Based on poems by Walt Whitman, political rhetoric, the Bible, and the Catholic Mass, this monumental work is a musical plea for peace.

Members of the congregation and the larger community are encouraged to join the UUCSR Choir as we prepare to sing this very moving work.

Androcles and the Lion, by George Bernard Shaw

About the play: "Using the Roman story of Androcles, Shaw examines true and false religious exaltation, combining the traditions of miracle play and Christmas pantomime into a philosophical farce about early Christianity. The play's central theme, recurrent in Shaw, is that one must have something worth dying for—an end outside oneself—to make life worth living."

WOMEN’S GROUP
Maria Ceraulo, Chair, Women’s Issues

From Being Ignored To Being in Charge

All of them experienced versions of being ignored, struggling to be recognized, and receiving extra scrutiny from male colleagues, often as the only woman in the room. Although they differ in political parties and philosophies, today’s team leading committees and offices that control US spending is made up entirely of women.

Among those in the group is the first black woman to head the Office of Management and Budget, Shalanda Young, a Democrat. She said, “With this group, I know that they care more about what’s best for the American people.” We may now hope that a huge bill won’t be rammed through Congress under threat of a shutdown.

Senator Patty Murray, a Democrat, remembers having to stand up and wave to catch the attention of the men running negotiations from the center of the room. Now, her name is etched in gold at the center of the table. She is Chairwoman of the Senate Appropriations Committee. A woman whose family once relied on food stamps, she is in charge. Senator Murray said, “We often think of our families in our communities.” She sees the work on the budget as “an opportunity for women to really work on making sure their country is OK.”

Republican Senator Susan Collins of Maine, who is vice chair of the Senate Appropriations Committee said, “We do bring different experiences, and in my experience, we are often more collaborative than our male counterparts.” She expressed the hope that although it will be difficult, they will work together as a team.

Acknowledging that this financial work has tremendous power, Rosa DeLauro, Democrat from Connecticut and chair of the House Appropriations Committee, believes it can potentially transform people’s lives.

Although this is a time of divided government where a major clash between Democrats and Republicans is anticipated, the women hope to bring some sanity and orderliness to the process. They are determined to find success. They’ve weathered shutdowns and threats of default—managing to turn spending packages into law during the last two years. They’ve worked on defense, national security, transportation, and education. These issues are important to women. As friends and colleagues for years, they share respect as well as expertise, and prospects seem good.

We look forward to the product of their work. We have every expectation that these women will come up with a budget that will reflect their sentiments and values, and that it will transform people’s lives.

A True Human Story with a Technology Setting

Mars Mission (possibly 2042) and Lunar Landing (1969), featuring and hosted by Gerry Matusiewicz and Herb Klitzner.

Gerry Jalazo created an analog computer program for astronaut training by Grumman and NASA to simulate the landing. Gerry worked for Grumman Corp. at that time.

In the first half of our program, Gerry Matusiewicz will interview Gerry Jalazo about his Grumman-NASA experiences in preparing for the 1969 landing.

In the second half, the three of us will describe and discuss the proposed Mars Mission:
• its formidable scientific obstacles (no gravity, radiation, social factors in a long trip); its benefits;
• its political controversies.

The Most Important Things in Life Are Not Things.

It appears that people who live at Hadley House tend to live longer than established longevity tables. The current record holders lived to be 104. As we write this column, two of our centenarians are approaching their 101st and 102nd birthdays. Could it be the result of the connectivity and support we provide to each other? For example, recently when resident Elaine Robbins passed away after a long illness, we gathered around her husband Michael and daughter Patti providing comfort and honoring this amazing woman’s life. The sharing and remembrance of experiences benefited us all. Soon after, we were informed of the passing of Roz Levinson, who moved away from Hadley House a year ago. A caravan of cars went to join her family sitting shiva at her daughter’s home in Commack.

Residents have, over the years, pulled together in difficult times and rejoiced together when times are good. That sense of connection and mutual care has built a strong community that truly values the “dignity and worth” of each of us. It empowers us all and welcomes spontaneity. The Caring Circle was revitalized this year with the ideas of new residents. They have taken the lead in organizing fun gatherings for movies and pizza. A Super Bowl party is in the works. Katherine Miller, a native of Ireland, is planning her third St. Patrick’s Day extravaganza, complete with a genuine piper! We were delighted to learn from Katherine that the inspiration for celebrating St. Patrick’s Day at Hadley House came from Roz Levinson of Jewish background. Wasn’t there a Jewish Mayor in Ireland, some years back? We will certainly raise our glass to Roz when we gather.

According to research provided by the New York Times, we are born to need social relationships. People with social connections live longer, and our residents are a wonderful example of their findings. We are a multigenerational community with residents ranging in age from 65 to 102. Here at Hadley House, there exists a vitality that seems to defy age. Even the plants flourish from attention and nourishment.

The essence of Unitarian Universalism, acceptance of everyone across differences, is reflected in the faces of our residents who have found companionship and support within the community that is Hadley House.

Folks want a lot of loving every minute—
The sympathy of others and their smile!
Till life’s end, from the moment they begin it,
Folks need a lot of loving all the while.
