In the Light of Mourning

The Bible tells us that the Children of Israel crossed the Jordan River into the Promised Land on the 10th day of the first month (Aviv/Nisan)[1]. This was after Joshua told them that they would cross the Jordan in 3 days[2], and after the whole camp mourned for Moshe for 30 days[3]. If we subtract 33 days from the 10th of Nisan, we find that Moshe died on the 7th day of the Hebrew month of Adar. This year, this day corresponds to February 16, 2024, on the Gregorian Calendar.

Though there is some disagreement in the Jewish communities on how to commemorate this day, it is generally agreed that this day should be a day of honor for Israeli Defense Soldiers (IDF) who have fallen in combat, but whose bodies have not been recovered. In the United States, we roll this day in with a Prisoners of War commemoration on the third Friday of the month of September (POW/MIA Recognition Day). The idea is that just as Moshe's body was never found, so also, we honor the fallen whose bodies aren't yet recovered.

This also gives us a template for honoring our own fallen loved ones. Each Sabbath, our synagogue offers the Mourner's Kaddish, which allows people to honor their loved ones through a prayer, glorifying the Greatness of our G-d. As with the case of Moshe, it is customary in Jewish communities to mourn for 30 days, except for the loss of our parents, for which we mourn 11 months. After that, we honor them on the anniversary of their death. Anything beyond this might stir a question, "What? Is this person you are mourning greater than Moshe?" The prayer is offered when the congregation gathers more than a minyan[4]. This is so the support of others might be brought to bear.

Interestingly, the Mourner's Kaddish is NOT delivered in Hebrew, but Aramaic. This is because it was established in a time when the common spoken language of the people was Aramaic. The Rabbis wanted to emphasize that the delivery of praise to our G-d is still well received by Him even in our own language or speech.

It is curious though, that a prayer called the "Mourner's Kaddish" would make no mention of death or mourning at all. The idea is that in our lives, we mourn the removal of a loved one. They are no longer in the land of the living but, for our Creator, such an event is NOT the removal of this person from His circle. In some Jewish thought, it is expected that the person who died would also feel a bit of loss from being removed from the land of the living and from their loved ones. The idea is that they now have a new place, standing before the Creator, expressing the greatness of His Majesty. Some may notice that during the prayer, the minyan, on the bema, takes steps backward and forwards, this is intentional movement.

In the Light of Mourning

It is thought that in our reciting the Mourner's Kaddish, we purpose to step into the throne room of the Holy One alongside our loved ones and join them in their worship. We proclaim the Greatness of our G-d, calling on Him to "make peace for all Israel" in Heaven who mourn their removal from the land of the living and from their loved ones. It is a request to restore the life diminished by their separation from their loved ones. Then stepping back into our world, we call on Him to "make peace for us" here in the earth, as we go on to live our lives without our loved one.

I recall in the loss of some of my family members that I wished to never give up the memory of these people. I really didn't want to get on with my life, as I felt that it was disrespectful to my loved one to callously return to my routines. Didn't my loss have an ongoing impact on the way I would live?

However, as Rav Shaul (Apostle Paul) said, we are not to grieve as those who have no hope[5], but we are to acknowledge in our lives that what we do day-by-day is our calling from above, and that we will once again rejoin those who have preceded us into the Kingdom. So let us carry on with that calling, for His sake.

Ask robbi The

Dear Rabbi?
Why do we do Kiddush
every week?
Is this like taking communion?

The Kiddush is a traditional prayer over the wine said by the head of the household on erev Shabbat, or before a holy day, or before a lunch preceding it. We do Kiddush (over the wine) at the end of our service to sanctify the Sabbath. This is followed by the HaMotzi (over the bread). These are said before a meal often (in our case before lunch after the Shabbat morning service). It is not communion, as that has its origin in the Passover Seder where the unleavened bread is taken first followed by the third cup, called the Cup of Redemption.

Black History Month

Here is an excerpt from:

"The Body of Messiah Yeshua was the Backbone of The Black Civil Rights Movement" by William S. Morris

"Although you don't hear it said much these days, the Civil Rights Movement in America was founded in the black church. Followers of Yeshua (Jesus) and the famed pastor, Reverend Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. led the fight for justice out of black churches across the south. These church followers of Yeshua firmly believed God was on their side and HIS power would set them free, just as the Hebrews had been set free in Egypt. Black congregations large and small put their lives on the line to fight for freedom, no matter the cost.

Even before the turbulent movement of the 1950's, 60's and 70's; the Abolitionist Movement which was based in the Christian congregations in the colonies was launched in 1820's, to free Africans who had been captured and forced into slavery in North America. Anthony Benezet, the founder of the antislavery movement in America in the mid-1700s worked to convince his Quaker brethren that slave-owning was not consistent with Christian doctrine."

African Americans assumed prominent roles in the Abolitionist Movement before the Civil War. Some 300 Black Abolitionists were regularly involved in the movement as speakers, writers, managers of anti-slavery offices, and behind the scenes in the work of the Underground Railroad. They heightened the credibility of the cause and broadened its agenda, shaping the struggle into America's first civil rights movement."

SHAMASHIM LEADERS

Sean and Kasia Derrickson

1. What does it mean to you to be a Shamash?

Sean: For me, the meaning of being a Shamash is constantly changing. Sometimes I feel like I just need to support the congregation by simply being there. Other times I feel like there's some issue burning inside of me that I really need to try to get others to see. So it really just depends.

KNOW YOU!

GETTING TO Kasia: It is an honor, and a humbling experience at the same time. Over the years, you can see how much (the congregation has) been through, how much we've grown but most of all, we can see Adonai's faithfulness to sustain, protect and lead CBM according to His calling. I love to serve alongside this amazing group of men and women, who are committed to selflessly and prayerfully do what is needed to build and support the CBM community.

2. Is there a Bible verse that's guided your family?

Kasia: Proverbs 22:6 and Isaiah 54:13.

3. Is there a vision you have for Beth Messiah or Messianic Judaism in general? What is it?

Sean: The main vision of CBM is the Salvation and restoration of the Jewish people. But, how to accomplish that, how to move that vision forward, seems to me to be the million dollar question. But I think the larger issue: what is the body of Messiah to be doing right now. It is a question that everybody needs to grapple with at the moment. The world just seems so chaotic and confused that it's really difficult to know how to faithfully serve the Lord. Sometimes it seems like you could go out there and just be telling people how wrong they are all the time, but then you wanna love people, it's really difficult time in a way.

4. You both grew up in the 80's, what is your favorite 80's hairstyle, clothing style or toy?

Sean: Parachute pants were great.

Kasia: When I think of 80s hairstyles, lots of hairspray, crimped hair and heavy bangs come to mind. Even though as a little girl I didn't get to wear my hair in any way that wasn't a tight braid, I do have pictures proving that bangs were most definitely in fashion, whether they suited anyone or not.
