

A Witness Through Conduct

Reflection

Peter teaches that a believing spouse can have a powerful influence through godly conduct. In the first-century world, many women had little opportunity to openly challenge or persuade their husbands. Instead, their transformed lives became a testimony to the power of the gospel. While our culture is different today, the principle remains the same. The way we live often speaks louder than the words we say.

Illustration

A lighthouse does not argue with the ships in the storm. It simply shines steadily in the darkness, guiding others safely to shore.

Application

Consider the relationships in your life. Does your daily conduct reflect the transforming power of Christ? Ask God to help your actions consistently point others toward Him.

Prayer

Lord, help my life reflect Your goodness and grace. May my conduct honor You and point others toward the hope found in Christ.